Proskauer Strengthens Regulatory and Public Law Capabilities with Leading Lawyer Christine Le Bihan-Graf

August 28, 2026

PARIS, August 28, 2026 – Proskauer announced today that Christine Le Bihan-Graf has joined the Firm as a partner in its Paris office. A recognized authority on energy and industrial regulation, Christine helps clients structure and close infrastructure investments and transactions across highly regulated sectors. The addition bolsters the Firm's complex public law capabilities in France and across Europe.

Christine is highly regarded by decision-makers in government and business in France, with a deep working knowledge of the institutions that shape how major transactions get done. She headed the French Energy Regulatory Commission, France's energy regulator, and served on the Conseil d'État, the nation's highest administrative court. She has spent the last decade in private practice, building and leading regulatory and energy transition practices for leading French and global law firms. Christine is ranked Band 1 for energy regulatory work in Chambers France.

Christine advises infrastructure funds, financial institutions, major industrial companies and public-sector entities on public business law, sector regulation and complex projects. Her practice spans a broad range of strategic sectors, including energy, transport, public utilities, life sciences, and healthcare, where she advises clients on regulatory frameworks, public procurement, concessions, permitting and other high-stakes public law issues. She is recognized for her expertise in energy and environment law and advises on power purchase and trading, nuclear, renewables, grid connection, hydrogen, energy storage, data center infrastructure and other strategic infrastructure assets.

"Christine is a strong addition to our Paris office as we continue to grow strategically in key practice areas and geographic markets to meet our clients' evolving needs," said Tim Mungovan, Chair of Proskauer. "Her arrival strengthens our European platform, and her expertise will benefit clients across a broad range of industries and transactions. I am delighted to welcome her to the Firm."

"Christine is one of France's leading public law lawyers, and her arrival marks an important milestone in the continued development of our Paris office," said Xavier Norlain, Head of Proskauer's Paris office. "Her practice is a natural complement to our market-leading private capital team, adding first-class public law and regulatory capabilities across infrastructure, energy and other strategic sectors. Together, we can provide highly technical and decisive advice to our clients in complex transactions and investments where public law and regulatory challenges are increasingly critical."

"I am pleased to join Proskauer at such an exciting time for the Firm's growth," Christine said. "Businesses and investors across a range of sectors are increasingly navigating complex regulatory frameworks and public-sector considerations. Proskauer's premier private capital platform, collaborative culture, and international reach allows us to help clients address those challenges."

Proskauer continues to build in Paris as part of its broader European growth strategy. The Paris office now comprises more than 60 lawyers, reinforcing the Firm's position as one of the leading advisers to private capital clients investing across France and Europe.
