

San Francisco Passes the “Retail Workers Bill of Rights”

California Employment Law Blog on January 20, 2015

San Francisco recently enacted two sweeping ordinances that are being referred to as the “Retail Workers Bill of Rights” (you can find the ordinances here and here). The new laws impose strict new requirements on retail employers and establishments in the City of San Francisco. While the ordinances became effective on January 5, 2015, employers will have until July 5, 2015 to comply. Below is an overview of the new laws’ requirements... Continue Reading
