

Credit Checks To Be Banned in NYC

Law and the Workplace Blog on April 17, 2015

Yesterday, by a 47-3 vote, the New York City Council passed a bill (Int. 0261-2014) to amend the NYC Human Rights Law to prohibit most employers from inquiring into or considering a prospective or current employee's credit history when making employment decisions. Mayor DeBlasio is expected to sign the bill into law... Continue Reading
