

New Nevada Law Expands Employer Access to Conviction Records

Law and the Workplace Blog on June 25, 2015

While Nevada law does not limit how far back employers can directly ask applicants or employees about their conviction history, for years it has generally prohibited consumer reporting agencies (CRAs) from providing employers with conviction records that are more than 7 years old... Continue Reading