

SCOTUS Brings More Certainty to District Court Claim Constructions

New England IP Blog on January 29, 2015

Since at least 1996, the Federal Circuit has reviewed district court claim constructions de novo. This de novo standard introduced great uncertainty into patent cases: A favorable claim construction, even one supported by detailed factual findings by the district court, could be set aside by the Federal Circuit without any deference whatsoever...