

In Trademark Dispute, New Hampshire School Website Address Not Taken For Granite

New England IP Blog on August 19, 2015

New Hampshire is commonly referred to as the Granite State. In one recent trademark infringement case, however, a federal court in New Hampshire did not find a likelihood of consumer confusion between website addresses for competing trade schools, where one school uses the term “NH” and the other uses the term “Granite State”...