

TalkTalk handed record fine in data protection breach in the UK

Privacy Law Blog on October 7, 2016

TalkTalk, a major UK telecoms company, has been fined £400,000 for a data breach after they were hacked. This is a record fine given by the ICO (the UK's data protection authority). Significantly the fine was imposed after a change of leadership this summer when Elizabeth Denham (previously the Information Commissioner in the Canadian province of British Columbia) replaced Christopher Graham as the Information Commissioner...
