Race to Courthouse in Shareholder Derivative Actions Could Raise Due-Process Issues

Corporate Defense and Disputes Blog on January 20, 2017

The Delaware Supreme Court requested further consideration of the federal due-process issues that might arise where a court is asked to hold that a shareholder derivative action is precluded because a prior derivative action was dismissed based on the first plaintiff's failure to make a demand on the company's board before filing suit... Continue Reading