

Google Escapes Genericide Claim in Ninth Circuit Decision

New Media & Technology Law Blog on July 5, 2017

On May 16, 2017, the Ninth Circuit rejected a petition for cancellation of the GOOGLE trademark based on a “genericide” theory that claimed Google should lose its trademark protection because the word “google” has become synonymous to the public with the term “search the internet.”... Continue Reading