

Fangli Chen Named US Patent Prosecution Practitioner of the Year by Managing IP

April 15, 2021

April 15, 2021 (BOSTON) – Proskauer partner Fangli Chen, PhD, was named the Patent Prosecution Practitioner of the Year in the US by Managing IP magazine. Honorees were chosen based on six months of in-depth research and analysis by the publication. Held virtually, the 16th annual Managing IP Americas Awards 2021 recognized the “firms, individuals and companies behind the most innovative and challenging intellectual property work of the past year, as well as those driving the international market.”

Fangli serves as vice chair of Proskauer’s Life Sciences Patent practice and is an accomplished patent lawyer representing biotech and pharmaceutical clients well known for her problem solving skills as well as her expertise in patent strategy and management. Fangli effectively identifies and transforms technological developments into valuable intellectual property assets for her clients and specializes in the strategic development of complex IP portfolios for companies that align with their business goals.

About Our Life Sciences Group

Proskauer’s multidisciplinary Life Sciences Group brings together the critical skill sets and experience to litigate important intellectual property matters, create and grow life sciences companies, obtain intellectual property rights, raise capital and negotiate and execute strategic deals. We represent mature pharma and biotech companies in accessing and protecting markets, early-to-later-stage companies in developing new medical technologies, investors in their strategic transactions, as well as universities and other academic or research institutions in realizing commercial value from the innovations of their faculty and research staff.

Related Professionals

- Fangli Chen, Ph.D.
Partner