Registered investment advisers meeting the criteria of the no-action letter may withdraw from registration on the basis of the no-action letter without complying with the terms of another exemption from registration, such as the 4.13(a)(3) exemption for limited derivatives users. The CFTC staff stated that the relief was issued on an "interim" basis while the CFTC considers reinstating the "QEP Exemption" which was previously codified in Rule 4.13(a)(4) but was rescinded in 2012 in the wake of the global financial crisis. 19 December - U.S. Marketing Rule: The Managed Funds Association (the “MFA”), an asset management industry trade association, submitted a no-action letter request to the SEC’s Division of Investment Management (“IM”), requesting additional FAQ guidance on the Marketing Rule. Though the request is still pending as of this writing and there are no assurances that IM will provide guidance in the requested form, or at all, it is rare that a request for guidance from an industry group reaches the stage where it is formally submitted for consideration unless IM has provided informal indications to the group that the request would be acted upon favorably in the near term.
