Chambers noted in its commentary about Proskauer: “This highly regarded international player has secured a solid position in the Brazilian market with a dedicated team of Portuguese and Spanish-speaking attorneys who work closely with the practice in New York. The finance team handles a large volume of structured and syndicated bank lending deals and particularly stands out for its expertise in trade finance and debt reorganisation. The São Paulo division has established a solid local presence for capital markets and the team primarily represents financial institutions and focuses on structured finance deals and debt restructuring. The group routinely represents international clients seeking to invest in the region as well as locally based companies looking to benefit from the team's specialist knowledge of the US market.” Sources added, “the team demonstrates excellent knowledge of international law and financial contracts and stands out for its vast experience and its swift and practical approach. They provide an agile service and the partners are always available.”
