Christina Maria Assi is an associate in the Litigation Department. She focuses on complex civil and commercial litigation matters, including products liability and partnership disputes. Christina has represented clients in state and federal courts across the country and advised clients in connection with requests for information from regulatory authorities. Christina has experience preparing for trials, briefing dispositive and pre-trial motions, assisting in taking and defending depositions, and preparing for witness examinations. Christina has previously represented a medical device manufacturer in connection with complex and multi-plaintiff products liability actions in all phases of litigation, including discovery and trial preparation.

Christina graduated magna cum laude from Georgetown University Law Center. While at Georgetown, Christina served as symposium editor for the Georgetown Environmental Law Review.
