Eddie Wang is an associate in the Litigation Department and a member of the Intellectual Property group. He focuses his practice on complex commercial litigation, intellectual property litigation, privacy and cybersecurity litigation, and cybersecurity incident response. Eddie's intellectual property practice includes an emphasis on patents, trademarks, and trade secrets. He also has experience litigating a broad range of technologies including cybersecurity technology, mobile applications, cellular technology, digital televisions, video codecs and fuel cells.

Before practicing law, Eddie worked as a Patent Examiner at the United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO) for nearly six years. While there, he examined patents related to memory for electrical computers and digital processing systems.
