Erica Loomba is a senior associate in the Immigration & Nationality Group.

Erica has been practicing immigration law for over 15 years and her practice areas include: obtaining employment-based immigrant and non-immigrant visas for professionals in the pharmaceutical, biotechnological, financial, retail, scientific, educational and computer industries; providing advice on immigration and employment governmental regulations, policy and practice compliance; and assisting with consular processing. Erica helps actively manage the practice group's blog and helped author "How to Make Immigration Law Work for Your Business: A Small Business Guide," a publication prepared for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

While in law school, Erica participated in the Immigration and Naturalization Service's Summer Law Internship Honors Program, where she was responsible for researching, writing and analyzing legal issues for the General Counsel's enforcement and employment sanctions divisions.

Erica is fluent in several South Asian dialects, including Hindi, Punjabi and Urdu.
