Jennifer Wexler is a senior associate in the Immigration & Nationality Group, who concentrates her practice in representing multinational corporate clients in various industries, such as fashion and retail, banking and finance. She works with a wide range of multinational banking corporations and has a particular focus in the fashion and retail industries, advising and representing both international and domestic fashion houses in all their related immigration matters. She has extensive experience serving clients of all sizes in the arts and design professions.

Jennifer manages the production and processing of all non-immigrant and immigrant case work for multinational corporate clients as well as small businesses. She performs complex case review and assessment of individual case strategy development, and internal compliance management of documentation, including LCAs and I-9s. She specializes in visas for managers, executives, specialized knowledge professionals, students; and perm labor certifications and employment based immigrant visa petitions. Jennifer interfaces with clients, senior management, counsel, and field human resources staff on all facets of immigration matters, such as requirements, alternative immigration strategies and updates in law and processes. She also provides assistance in policy development and its consistent legal application.
