Jonathan Slowik represents employers in all aspects of litigation, up to and through trial and appeal. A subject matter expert on class actions and actions under the Private Attorneys General Act (PAGA), Jonathan has defended dozens of class, collective, and representative actions in state and federal trial and appellate courts throughout California and beyond. Jonathan also defends employers in single- and multi-plaintiff discrimination, harassment, and retaliation cases, though trial and appeal. Jonathan also advises clients on a wide range of compliance issues and on employment issues arising in corporate transactions.

Jonathan's deep experience representing employers extends to a wide variety of industries, including retail, hospitality, health care, telecommunications, finance, media, entertainment, professional services, manufacturing, sports, nonprofit, and information technology.

A math enthusiast with training in statistics, probability, econometrics, and theoretical mathematics, Jonathan brings his facility with numerical and economic concepts to bear in representing clients, especially in developing and rebutting expert testimony.

Jonathan is a frequent contributor to Proskauer's California Employment Law Blog and has written extensively about PAGA on various platforms. He has been published or quoted in Law360, the Daily Journal, the California Lawyer, the Northern California Record, and the UCLA Law Review.

Jonathan received his B.A. in mathematics from the University of Southern California in 2007, magna cum laude, and J.D. from UCLA School of Law in 2012, where he was a managing editor of the UCLA Law Review.
