Jordan Lewis joined Proskauer's Private Credit Group after completing an M.B.A. at the University of Chicago Booth School of Business. While at Booth, he completed a fellowship at the Obama Foundation and served as chairman of Booth's African-American MBA Association. Jordan earned his J.D. from University of Michigan Law School, where he served as an editor on the Michigan Technology law Review and Vice President of the Michigan Election Law Project.

Prior to business school, Jordan served on Active Duty in the U.S. Army Judge Advocate General Corps. During his active tenure, Jordan held posts as Military Justice Advisor, Administrative and Civil law Attorney, Brigade Judge Advocate, Legal Assistance Attorney and a Contract and Fiscal law Attorney while deployed to Kuwait and Iraq. Jordan still serves in the U.S. Army Reserve, currently as a Defense Counsel.
