Nicholas (“Carter”) Noon is a partner in the Private Funds Group and co-leads the Firm’s global credit funds initiative.

Carter advises a broad range of asset managers in the establishment of all types of private funds and in their business and operations, with a focus on fund formation and structuring, and in particular the formation and structuring of private credit funds.

Carter also counsels clients on funds of one, co-investments, managed accounts, fund restructurings, joint-ventures, and day-to-day operational and regulatory matters. He has significant experience with the establishment and maintenance of general partner and management company entities, including with respect to economic, internal governance, regulatory and day-to-day operational issues. In addition, he routinely represents institutional investors when investing into private investment funds.

In addition to work with a wide array of established fund sponsors, Carter counsels emerging managers, including in connection with seeding arrangements, initial fund formation and related matters.
