As a corporate associate and member of the Firm's Private Investment Funds group, Tazia Statucki focuses on regulatory and compliance matters affecting private funds and their advisers. She counsels clients on a range of issues arising under U.S. securities laws, including the Advisers Act and the Investment Company Act.

Prior to joining Proskauer, Tazia gained valuable experience at global law firms where she worked on regulatory, compliance, and enforcement-related matters within the financial services industry. During her tenure at the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, Tazia served as a Senior Counsel in the Office of the General Counsel and the Office of International Affairs, advising on sophisticated regulatory and enforcement matters involving novel legal questions and cross-border considerations.

In addition to her legal practice, Tazia is a Professorial Lecturer in Law at The George Washington University Law School. In this role, she coaches law students in written and oral advocacy, preparing them for both advocacy competitions and professional practice.
