Synopsis
Background: Customers who received local telephone service from competing local exchange carrier (LEC) brought action against incumbent LEC, alleging antitrust and Communications Act violations. The United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, 123 F.Supp.2d 738, Sidney H. Stein, J., dismissed action, and customers appealed. Superseding its prior opinion, 294 F.3d 307, the Second Circuit Court of Appeals, 305 F.3d 89, Katzmann, Circuit Judge, affirmed in part, vacated in part and remanded. Incumbent LEC's petition for writ of certiorari was granted.

Holdings: The Supreme Court, Justice Scalia, held that:

[1] Telecommunications Act of 1996 had no effect upon application of traditional antitrust principles, in light of antitrust-specific saving clause which barred finding of implied immunity;

[2] complaint alleging breach of incumbent LEC's duty to share its network with competitors did not state monopolization claim under § 2 of Sherman Act;

[3] traditional antitrust principles did not justify addition of case to few existing exceptions to proposition that there was no duty to aid competitors; and

[4] disposition of case made it unnecessary to consider alternative contention of lack of antitrust standing.

Reversed and remanded.

Justice Stevens filed opinion concurring in judgment in which Justices Souter and Thomas joined.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

PRO MUSIC RIGHTS, LLC,
Plaintiff,
v.
APPLE, INC. et al.,
Defendants.

No. 3:20-cv-00309 (JAM)

ORDER GRANTING MOTION TO DISMISS

Plaintiff Pro Music Rights, LLC ("PMR") has filed this antitrust lawsuit against more than two dozen music industry defendants including major music streaming providers and organizations that negotiate musical performance (or "play") licenses for radio and television providers and wineries. The complaint alleges scores of violations of the Sherman Act, the Connecticut Antitrust Act, and the Connecticut Unfair Trade Practices Act. Twelve of the defendants now move to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Because I agree that PMR's complaint does not contain factual allegations that plausibly state a claim, I will grant the motion to dismiss.

Background

PMR initially named 25 defendants, although eight of the initial defendants have been voluntarily dismissed with prejudice and others have yet to be served. See Docs. #130 at 1; #147 at 10 n.2; #172. The remaining defendants include the following eight "streaming defendants":

- Apple, Inc.;
- Amazon.com, Inc;
- Google, LLC;
- YouTube, LLC;
- Spotify USA, Inc.;
- Deezer Inc.;
- Pandora Media, LLC; and

"The consent decrees force a contrived and restrictive licensing system that produces below-market rates and imposes a court-administered rate-setting process in the rate court that is unresponsive to market forces and unable to consider all relevant data. To maintain this favorable status quo and 'two-stop shopping,' defendants have used a variety of aggressive tactics against PMR … including refusal to negotiate with them or acknowledge them as legitimate sellers, agreeing to boycott PMR…."

"But 'as a general matter, the Sherman Act does not restrict the long recognized right of a trader or manufacturer engaged in an entirely private business, freely to exercise his own independent discretion as to parties with whom he will deal.' Verizon Commc'ns Inc. v. Law Offices of Curtis v. Trinko, LLP, 540 U.S. 398, 408 (2004) (cleaned up). This means the fact that none of the defendants have chosen to do business with PMR does not show that this refusal to deal is because of any illicit understanding among the defendants. "

Will We See a Rise in the Failing Firm Defense?

"To be clear, we support vigorous competition and hope that firms that have been hard hit by the economic downturn recover quickly and remain viable competitors so that they can continue to serve their customers. We will accept solid evidence that a firm is failing, and step aside when justified by the full evidence. But we will not turn away from the challenges ahead by changing the rules that have served us well in the past, including during prior economic downturns. And we ask that counsel not make that job harder by seeking advantage from the suffering of some."
– Ian Conner, director of the FTC's Bureau of Competition, May 2020

"We may be more receptive to [the failing firm defense] from the standpoint when you say we're in dire financial straits because we've been closed for three months, we've seen drop-off in revenues.… What we think is different is that now we are looking even more diligently at [buyers' and sellers'] current financial state and their debt because of this crisis. Those are questions that we would have asked before. It's just now with Covid, there's concern with debt financing and viability that are directly resulting from the Covid crisis." – Interview with Ian Conner, July 2020

The Paramount Consent Decrees

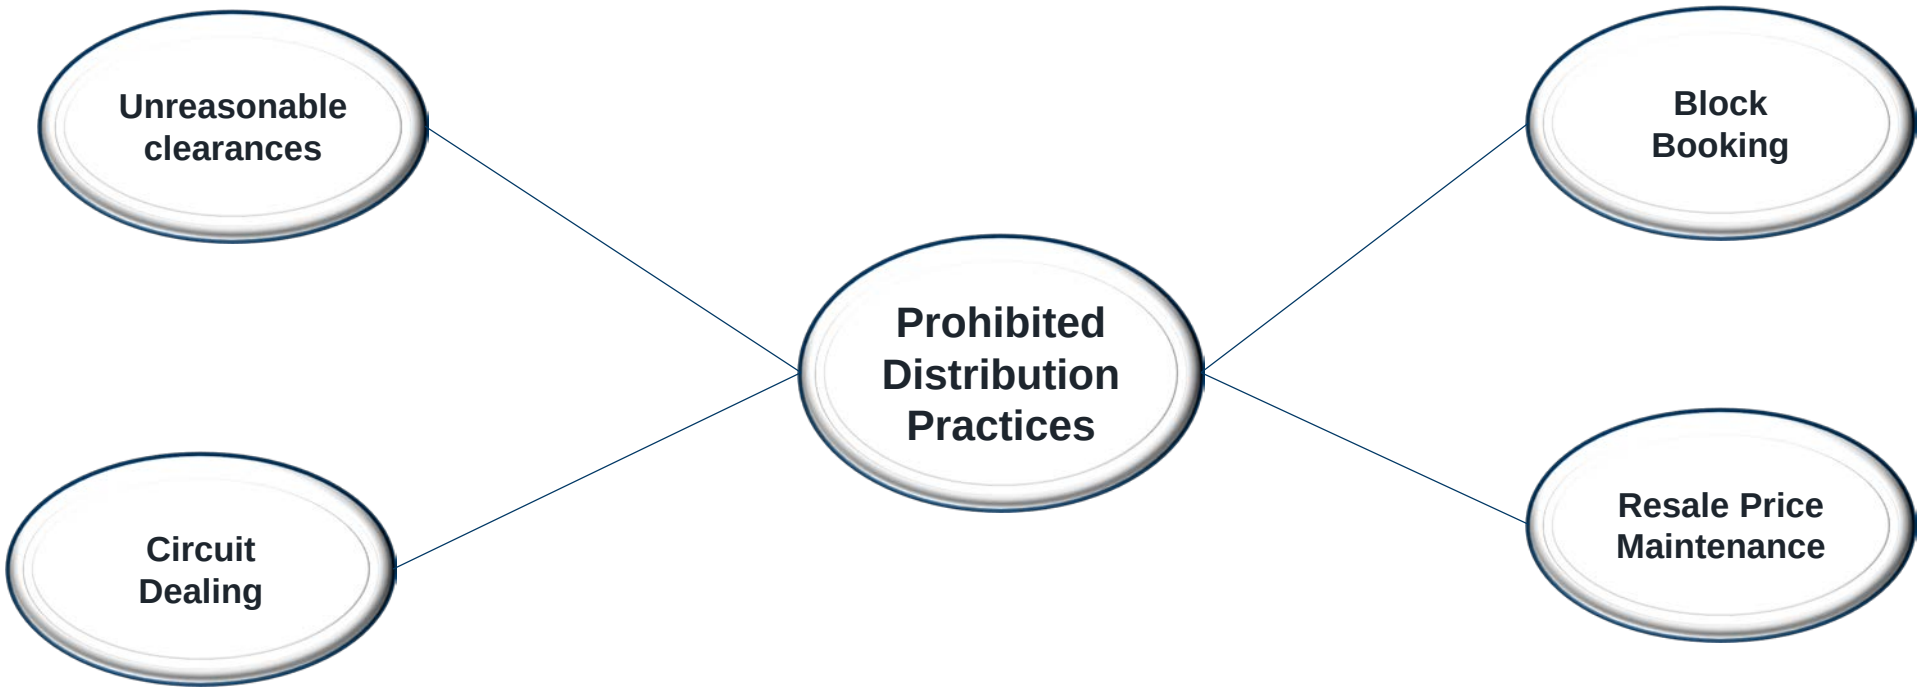
- The DOJ has regulated how certain movie studios distribute films to movie theaters for over 70 years.
- In 1938, the DOJ filed an antitrust lawsuit alleging that eight major motion pictures, including Paramount Pictures, Twentieth Century-Fox, and Warner Brothers, conspired to control the motion picture industry through their ownership of film distribution and exhibition.
- The district court found that defendants had engaged in a widespread conspiracy to illegally fix motion picture prices and monopolize both the film distribution and movie theater markets.
- The Supreme Court upheld the decision in 1948.

> "The practices were bald efforts to substitute monopoly for competition and to strengthen the hold of the exhibitor-defendants on the industry by alignment of competitors on their side. Clearer restraints of trade are difficult to imagine." United States v. Paramount, 334 U.S. 131, 149 (1948).

The Effects of the Paramount Consent Decrees

- Changed the structure of the motion picture industry
- Created a separation between film distribution and exhibition
- Required the major defendants to sell their theaters to new independent companies



Proskauer

The Antitrust Division's Review of the Decrees

The Division argued there were four reasons terminating the Decrees would be in the public interest

1. The Decrees achieved the Supreme Court's remedial mandate to this Court: they "uproot[ed]" and ended Defendants' illegal conspiracy and, along with the passage of time, "rid" the industry of "all taint of the conspiracy," "undoing what the conspiracy achieved."
2. Changes in the motion picture industry over the last seventy years have made it unlikely that the remaining Defendants could or would reinstate their cartel to monopolize the motion picture distribution and theater markets.
3. Antitrust case law has evolved to undermine the Decrees' ongoing regulatory provisions.
4. The Sherman Act will continue to provide effective deterrence against any industry-wide attempts to re-establish a cartel to monopolize the film distribution and exhibition markets.

The Court Terminates the Decrees

- Technological innovation, new competitors, and shifting customer demand have fundamentally changed the industry
- No movie distributor owns a major theater
- Films today are broadly released in single theatrical runs
- Competitors have changed
- Antitrust law has changed
  - Decrees treated certain conduct as per se illegal that today may be deemed legal and beneficial to competition and consumers
  - Statutory merger law has changed – HSR Act
- The Supreme Court's rulings in the Paramount litigation still exist to deter conduct

> "Termination simply implies that this Court, in performing a 'necessarily forward-looking and probabilistic' evaluation, determined that termination would be in the public interest because there is a low 'likelihood of a potential future violation, … given the changes in the market and the fact that motion picture distributors not subject to the Decrees have shown no propensity to acquire major movie theater circuits or engage in the type of collusive practices the Decrees targeted."

Epic Litigations

- Antitrust lawsuits launched against Apple and Google.
- Both target restrictions that force developers to distribute apps through Apple's App Store and Google's Play Store.
  - Developers are charged a 30% commission on app purchases and on all in-app payments.
  - Epic claims this leads to monopolizing the markets for app distribution (Apple & Google), and alleges breach of the duty to deal (Apple).
- Goal: get courts to force the platform makers to accept the use of alternative in-app payment systems (e.g., PayPal).

Proskauer

Epic Arguments & Possible Consequences

- Themes
  - Epic: Apple and Google collectively dominate mobile platforms. Yes, Epic breached its contracts, but only because the restrictions are illegal.
  - Apple & Google: They are private, entrepreneurial companies, not public utilities. Epic is merely seeking more money.
- What's at stake?
  - Epic: Pressure these companies to change their practices.
  - Apple & Google: Punish breaches.

Courts Have Yet to Indicate How the Relevant Market Will be Defined

- Pistacchio plaintiffs claim the relevant market = the "iOS subscription-based mobile gaming services market" (i.e., the Apple Arcade gaming service)
  - Pending motion to dismiss attacks this "gerrymandered" definition head on.
- Epic alleges the relevant market = iOS application distribution market (i.e., the App Store).
  - Apple responds that the relevant market is broader: all competing platforms that distribute Fortnite, e.g., Xbox, PlayStation, computers, tablets.

Google

Defendant.

COMPLAINT

The United States of America, acting under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States, and the States of Arkansas, Florida, [illegible] Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, South Carolina, [illegible] Attorneys General, bring this action under Sectio[illegible] restrain Google LLC (Google) from unlawfully m[illegible] general search services, search advertising, and g[illegible] States through anticompetitive and exclusionary [illegible] conduct.

For years, Google has entered into exclusionary agreements … to lock up distribution channels and block rivals. Google pays billions of dollars each year … to secure default status for its general search engine [or] specifically prohibit Google's counterparties from dealing with Google's competitors.

Google is now positioning itself to dominate search access points on the next generation of search platforms: internet-enabled devices such as smart speakers, home appliances, and automobiles (so-called internet-of-things, or IoT, devices).

DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

Plaintiffs allege the following upon personal knowledge as to themselves and their own acts, and as to all other matters upon information and belief, based upon the investigation made by and through their attorneys.

I. INTRODUCTION

1. Defendant Amazon.com, Inc. ("Amazon") operates the Amazon.com retail platform, which is the largest retail eBooks seller in the United States. It sells over half of all books purchased at retail in the United States.[1] Almost 90% of all eBooks are sold through its online retail platform.[2]

2. Defendant's Co-conspirators Hachette Book Group ("Hachette"); HarperCollins Publishers L.L.C. ("HarperCollins"); Macmillan Publishing Group, LLC ("Macmillan"); Penguin Random House LLC ("Penguin"); Simon & Schuster, Inc.; and Simon & Schuster Digital Sales, Inc. (collectively "Simon & Schuster") are the five largest publishers in the United States, otherwise known collectively as the "Big Five." The Big Five produce "trade

Amazon's use of MFN provisions in its agreements with book publishers harms competition in the retail book market, including the eBook market.

But Are the Antitrust Laws Really Up to the Task?

Antitrust Law Has its Limits

- Being a monopolist is ok
- No obligation to deal with rivals
- No non-discrimination obligations

LAW OFFICES OF CURTIS V. TRINKO, LLP.

No. 02-682.

Argued Oct. 14, 2003.

Decided Jan. 13, 2004.

Synopsis

Background: Customers who received local telephone service from competing local exchange carrier (LEC) brought action against incumbent LEC, alleging antitrust and Communications Act violations. The United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, 123 F.Supp.2d 738, Sidney H. Stein, J., dismissed action, and customers appealed. Superseding its prior opinion, 294 F.3d 307, the Second Circuit Court of Appeals, 305 F.3d 89, Katzmann, Circuit Judge, affirmed in part, vacated in part and remanded. Incumbent LEC's petition for writ of certiorari was granted.

Holdings: The Supreme Court, Justice Scalia, held that:

[1] Telecommunications Act of 1996 had no effect upon application of traditional antitrust principles, in light of antitrust-specific saving clause which barred finding of implied immunity;

[2] complaint alleging breach of incumbent LEC's duty to share its network with competitors did not state monopolization claim under § 2 of Sherman Act;

[3] traditional antitrust principles did not justify addition of case to few existing exceptions to proposition that there was no duty to aid competitors; and

[4] disposition of case made it unnecessary to consider alternative contention of lack of antitrust standing.

53 Cases that cite this headnote

"As a general matter, the Sherman Act does not restrict the long recognized right of a trader or manufacturer engaged in an entirely private business, freely to exercise his own independent discretion as to parties with whom he will deal."

Weaker Tech Does Not Mean Better Information

- Antitrust is concerned with too few voices; the problem with fake news is too many voices
- Fake news arises from a "market failure," known as the market for lemons; increased competition may make the problem worse

Mastercard and Visa stop allowing their cards to be used on Pornhub.

Dec. 10, 2020
By Gillian Friedman

Mastercard and Visa said they had prohibited the use of their cards on the adult website Pornhub, after the New York Times columnist Nicholas Kristof reported that the platform included videos of child abuse and rape.

Both companies had started investigations this week into their financial ties with MindGeek, the parent company of Pornhub.

Mastercard said in a statement on Thursday that the investigation “confirmed violations of our standards prohibiting unlawful content on their site,” which prompted the company to terminate the acceptance of its cards on the site.

In a separate statement, Visa said, “We are instructing the financial institutions who serve MindGeek to suspend processing of payments through the Visa network,” pending the completion of its investigation.

Nearly seven million videos are posted on Pornhub each year, and although the vast majority of them probably depict consensual acts, many do not, Mr. Kristof wrote. He reported that videos of teenage girls who had been victims of assault and trafficking had been found on the website.

“In each case, offenders were arrested for the assaults, but Pornhub escaped responsibility for sharing the videos and profiting from them,” Mr. Kristof wrote.

Pornhub, which said on Tuesday that it had made changes to prevent the use of nonconsensual content, said on Thursday that Mastercard’s and Visa’s measures were “exceptionally disappointing.”

Mastercard said it would continue to investigate potential illegal content on other websites, and take action as necessary.
