

Erin Marie Meyer
Pro Bono Counsel
Proskauer Rose LLP

Erin Marie Meyer is the Pro Bono Counsel at Proskauer Rose LLP, where she connects the Firm's lawyers to pro bono opportunities through a diverse network of legal services and nonprofit organizations. She also provides practice support and supervision to lawyers handling a variety of pro bono projects, and maintains her own case load of pro bono litigation matters. Throughout her career, Erin has demonstrated a strong commitment to pro bono work, particularly in the areas of immigration, LGBTQ rights, and anti-trafficking. Erin was one of the lead authors of Creating Equal Access to Quality Health Care for Transgender Patients: Transgender-Affirming Hospital Policies, a first-of-its-kind publication designed to guide hospitals in complying with legal and regulatory mandates and adopting best practices for the care of transgender patients. As co-counsel with the National Center for Law and Economic Justice and Natural Resources Defense Council, she represents New York City public housing tenants suffering from asthma in a class action litigation seeking to compel the New York City Housing Authority to remediate mold and excessive moisture in the tenants' apartments. Erin currently serves on the board of the Jim Collins Foundation, a nonprofit that funds gender-affirming surgeries for transgender people who need but cannot afford this medically necessary care.

Prior to joining Proskauer, Erin was a litigation associate at an international law firm where her practice focused on complex commercial litigation at both the trial and appellate level. Prior to that, she was an affiliated attorney at Lambda Legal, where she worked with the Transgender Rights Project Director on impact litigation cases in support of transgender civil rights.
