

Katherine Malone
Associate Counsel – Integrity & Investigations
National Basketball Association

Katherine Malone graduated from the University of Chicago in 2006, and from Columbia Law School in 2011. After graduating from Columbia, she clerked for Justice Craig Stowers of the Alaska Supreme Court and spent several years as an associate at Boies, Schiller & Flexner in Washington, D.C. She then returned to New York to serve as a prosecutor in the Manhattan District Attorney's Office, where she was assigned to Trial Bureau 60 and prosecuted hundreds of criminal cases. She currently works for the National Basketball Association as Associate Counsel --- Integrity & Investigations, where she investigates alleged misconduct across a range of areas and supports the League-wide integrity monitoring program.
